Hanging in there

Bridal Veil Falls Resort opened Saturday, however the tram will not begin running until next week. Here, Bret Crandall, left, and Ray Crandall, both of Springville, work on the tram ropes and cables. Key cables are being replaced on the tram, according to Dave Grow, manager. Workmen began replacing the tail rope and counterweight rope Friday and were expected to complete the job today. Recent improvements in steel technology have created better cables, and park officials want to use them, Grow said.

Nice weather for ducks — and for people

Several people take advantage of a beautiful fall day to feed ducks at Bridal Veil Falls in Provo Canyon.

Wonderful weather is forecast to continue for the next few days, making it possible for families and others to enjoy outdoor activities. Colder weather and a chance of thundershowers are predicted for the weekend.
